...ge F. Wilson,
atch from Den-
Saturday last, rumors that he

ners in Denver deeply involved on his account, that he brought away from there any large sum of money or had been guilty of any irregular action of any kind. On the contrary he says that he has been registered at the Palmer house in this city for three weeks past, and has been in daily negotiations with lending business men here, and had about consummated arrangements for securing enough capital to take up all his outstanding indebtedness there. Moreover he says that he has been in frequent communication with Lower his partner in that place who Wilson says is now also here and who has telegraphed back to Denver requesting the papers there to deny over his signature all statements representing Wilson as having avoided him or having been guilty of any improper business transaction, in which he is concerned.

* * *

St. Louis, July 29.—Mayor Price of Woodsdale, Kansas, in his statement to Governor Martin with reference to the Stevens county war, stated that when the news of the killing of Sheriff Cross and several of the posse reached Woodsdale it created the wildest excitement. A meeting was held and everybody was in favor of proceeding to Hugotown and killing as many as possible and then burning the town in retaliation, but wiser counsel prevailed. While the meeting was in session Mrs. Cross received a message from a Hugotown lawyer, telling her where the body or her husband could be found. The Woodsdale people have sent for 100 Winchesters and a wagon load of ammunition, and have picketed sentinels for several miles around Woodsdale, with instructions to fire upon any Hugotown man who attempts to pass them.

Declines to be a Candidate.

Indianapolis, July 29.—In political circles the chief topic of conversation all day has been the refusal of ex-Governor Porter to accept the gubernatorial nomination if tendered. In his letter Governor Porter says, "I have taken an active part in every republican campaign since the republican party was organized, except the one which occurred while I was holding office at Washington. After this long service, the state convention will, I am sure, refrain from pressing upon me a candidacy to which I would be averse and which I should feel obliged to decline. But while I shall not be indifferent to the success of the republican party nor shall my voice be silent in the important campaign which it is about to enter, I shall give whatever aid I am able to secure the triumph of the republican national ticket and the success of the candidates who shall be nominated at our state convention."

Bond Robbery.

Albany, N. Y., July 30.—About noon to-day P. H. Dederick of the well known firm of agricultural implement manufacturers drove to the Mechanics & Farmers bank and secured a package of bonds comprising series B of the debenture bonds issued by the Equitable Mortgage Co., of Kansas City, dated May 1st, 1887, and falling due on May 1st, 1892, for $10,000. The package he placed on the seat of his buggy. A man passing attracted his attention by saying that there was something the matter with the harness and while Dederick's head was turned a confederate dashed in and grabbed the bonds and made his escape. Dederick says the package contained bonds to the value of $10,000.

Emigration Enquiry.

New York, July 30.—Just as the congressional committee which is now investigating matters relating to foreign emigration was about to assemble to-day a telegram was handed to Chairman Ford telling him that his sister, Miss Eva Ford, had died suddenly from accidental poisoning while on her way from Lansing to meet her elder sister, Fannie, who is attending a convention of charities organizations at Mackinaw. At the request of Mr. Ford no adjournment was taken, and the investigation was continued with Colonel Oates in the chair. Mr. Ford leaving for Michigan on the first train.

Mining for Ten.

Pittsburg, July 29. A company was formed in this city last evening with a capital stock of $1,000,000, the object being to open a tin mine in New Mexico, near Durango. A tract of land has been purchased covering an area of ten miles square. The party who assayed the ore says it will yield from 25 to 35 per cent per ton of tin, which is the largest in the world. The distribution point will be El Paso.

Stock Markets.

New York, July 30.—The stock market was rather listless with small fluctuations. The active list was slightly higher this afternoon

California Fruit in Chicago.

Chicago, July 30.—Nine cars of California fruit were sold at the Union auction sale to-day. The peaches offered were the finest that have yet come to hand. The majority of the pears were quite ripe, but sold for good prices all round. The plums and prunes showed no variations from recent values.

A New Reservation.

Washington, July 30.—Chairman Holman of the committee on public lands to-day introduced in the house a bill to set apart a tract of land in New Mexico adjoining the Cochiti Indian reservation as a public reservation, on account of its archaeological remains.

Railway Accident.

Quincy, Ill., July 30. The Burlington fast train, west-bound, ran into a car which had got on the main track near Round Grove this morning. The engine and cars were completely wrecked. The engineer and fireman were badly hurt but none of the passengers were injured.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Exciting Debate in the Commons Over the Irish Commission.

The Judges Confirmed After A Long Discussion.

The Inquest Concluded in the Mandeville Case.

Emperor William Cordially Welcomed to Denmark.

The Commons Debate.

London, July 30.—The commons went into committee to-night to investigate the charges against Parnell.

Sexton moved to increase the number of judges on the commission to five. If it was to inquire into the whole history of the national league extending over nine years. Three judges were not sufficient unless the inquiry was limited.

Mathews said that the government could not accept the amendment. There would be nothing gained by increasing the number of the judges.

Sexton then reminded Matthews that the commission dealt with the charges for murder and outrage and that everything might turn upon the examination of witnesses in New York and Australia. He had nothing to say against two of the commissioners but he was surprised at the appointment of Justice Day after his conduct during the inquiry in the Belfast riots.

Anderson said he was astonished that the government dared to propose a tribunal to have power to appoint other commissioners to take evidence.

Parnell urged the house to recollect that they were discussing a proposal to provide a substitute for a jury while in England a jury of twelve was also provided. It was proposed that the settlement of the important far-reaching Irish issue would be decided by and upon the verdict of two men. (Hear, hear.) There was no precedent for it and he denied that it was any favor to the Irish members. On the contrary it was waiving their ordinary position as citizens in accepting the commission. The leading London conservative paper of to-day he declared stated that the question was no longer as to his innocence or guilt but as to the best means to prove him guilty. (Hear, hear). Was he to be held responsible for everything Patrick Ford said or did in America while the government was not responsible for what their organs did? (Irish cheers).

The amendment was then voted down. Smith having proposed that the commission should consist of Justices Hannen, Day and Smith.

Labouchere protested against the selection of Justices Day and Smith. He said that he believed the judges named had the complete approval of the English bar and every body of judicial knowledge.

Goschen explained that the government had selected these judges as non-political parties who had never been in parliament. He trusted that the house would endorse this view.

John Morley said that he quite understood the government's difficulty in altering the composition of the commission but that made no difference. Nothing has been said against Justices Hannen and Smith. Regarding Justice Day he said that he had received a letter from an absolutely reliable source. A gentleman having peculiar means of knowing Justice Day's mind upon Irish affairs and he had told Smith the name of his informant who wrote that Justice Day was a man of the seventeenth century in his views concerning Catholics. Like Torquemada, he was a tory of the high-flyer, non juror type. [Hear, hear.] He nightly rails against Parnell and his friends. He regards them as infidels and rebels, and as led astray by their Catholic notions. He believes them guilty of any crime. [Cries of name.] Morley said he could not publicly give the name. He proved his good faith by telling it to Smith. Surely in the face of a feeling of that kind toward Justice Day the government would not retain him on the commission against which there ought to be no whisper raised. He must vote against the nomination (cheers).

Balfour said that Morley had gone too far to maintain his reticence about the writer of the letter. Justice Day had the right to ask the name of his traducer. [Cheers.]

Morley assured the house that there was nothing sinister in his withholding the name of his correspondent. The person in question was a colleague of Justice Day on the Belfast riot commission and was a barrister named Adams. (Cheers.)

Gladstone said that he felt it his duty to support Morley after informing the government regarding Justice Day's bias and giving them the chance to alter the commission. It was right when they refused to make a change to communicate the facts to parliament. Also, the government might readily have selected another judge, one to whom there could be no objection. [Hear, hear.]

Goschen said that Morley had not shown the letter to any minister until Morley declared he only got the letter on Saturday.

Goschen said the government had had no time to communicate with Justice Day and ask him about the accuracy of the reported private conversation of Adams. (Cheers). The government was entirely ignorant of the politics of Justice Day.

Parnell said that he had heard every official accused of jury packing declare he new nothing about the politics or religion of jurors, but somehow it always happened that Orangemen were jurors, and were put on juries to try nationalists and Catholics. The government could not longer plead ignorance in regard to a commission composed of two conservatives and one unionist. The world would know to-morrow that the governments idea of fairness was that the nationalists should be tried by a jury of three English political opponents. (Cheers.)

Upon a division the vote stood for Justice Day 269, against him 180.

The names of Justice Hannen and Justice Smith were agreed to without division.

Anderson moved to omit the word "allegations" in the clause empowering the commission to inquire into the charge and allegations against certain members.

After nearly three hours' discussion the amendment was rejected, 265 to 200.

Chamberlain opposed the amendment. Its object he said was not to inquire into the plan of the campaign or boycotting except so far as necessary to show complicity in crime. Although he was no lawyer he ventured to say that if the amendment was carried it would be impossible to inquire into the first letter which the Times attributed to Parnell. It would shut out many of the Times' charges.

Parnell said that he had not before had an opportunity to acknowledge the compliment Chamberlain had paid Hinton a recent occasion. His recollections of Chamberlain's views was that before he was a minister he was always anxious to put the Irish party forward to do the work which he himself was afraid to do. After he became a minister he was always most anxious to betray to the Irish party the secrets of the cabinet and to endeavor while in the cabinet, to undermine their councils and plans in the interest of the Irish party. If inquiry was extended to these matters he would be able to make good his word by documentary and other evidence that had not been forged.

At this point the debate was adjourned.

The Mandeville Inquest Concluded.

Dublin, July 30.—The inquest on John Mandeville, the fellow prisoner of William O'Brien, in Tullamore jail, closed Saturday night with the following verdict from the coroner's jury: "We find that the deceased, John Mandeville, died on the 8th of July of diffused cellular inflammation of the throat as defined by the doctors, and brought about by the brutal and unjustifiable treatment he received in Tullamore jail. We enter our solemn protest against the system of the present government in awarding similar treatment to political prisoners as to common criminals, and the cruel method by which the rules are enforced. We condemn the vile aspersions of Dr. Barr on the doctors who attended John Mandeville." Dr. Barr is the gentleman who was sent from England in the interest of the government to [illegible] a post-mortem [illegible] prisoners and report. It was after his visit to Mandeville that the brave fellow was stripped naked in his cell by half a dozen wardens and left there shivering with the cold.

Emperor William's Visit.

Copenhagen, July 30. The German and Danish squadrons met at nine o'clock this morning a short distance south of Dragor. King Christian of Denmark and Crown Prince Frederick boarded the German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, which was flying the Danish colors and extended a cordial greeting to Emperor William. The sailors of the German vessels manned the yards and cheered the Danish squadron. Emperor William accompanied King Christian and the crown prince back to the Danish yacht which displayed the German flag and was brought to this city. The royal party landed at half past eleven and were received by a guard of honor. The band played the Prussian anthem as the Emperor stepped ashore.

Abandoned Their Residence.

Dublin, July 30. Mayor Mullins, of Sligo, has been tried and convicted of the charge of publishing boycotting notices in his newspaper, The Sligo Champion. He was sentenced to four months imprisonment.

The tenants on the Vandeleur estates in county Clare have resolved to abandon their residence to the payment of rent. It is expected that they will settle with the agent to-morrow. In that case there will be no more evictions.

A Chance for the Sheriff.

Denver, July 30.—There is considerable excitement here to-day in sporting circles over the fight announced to take place to-morrow between Sterling of Cheyenne and Ross of this city for a purse of $1000 and the championship of the west. The fight will be to a finish, London prize ring rules. A special train will leave the Union depot at 2 o'clock which will carry the principals and spectators to the place where the mill will take place.

French Strikers.

Paris, July 30.—This morning bands of striking navvies attempted to stop laborers at work in the yards who were guarded by police and troops. Various points in the suburbs are occupied by military detachments. At a meeting of 3000 navvies to-day it was decided to send to Minister Floquet's protest against the employment of troops and declaring that the police were responsible for the conflicts that have occurred.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES.

It has been determined by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to immediately complete the connection between the Philadelphia extension and Grand Island.

Masked robbers entered a farm house in Knox county, Ohio, Sunday night, beat the only men in the house with a club, bound him and stole $2600.

The thermometer at Nebraska City yesterday registered 104 in the shade. Several cases of sunstroke, one of which was fatal was reported.

[illegible] at Saratoga on Saturday, is suffering from a concussion of the brain. His condition is critical.

The lecture on America by Father Malone, delivered at the Catholic church on Sunday evening, was attended by a very large and interested audience. The reverend gentleman is a speaker of considerable oratorical ability, and held the attention of his audience throughout. The lecture showed how closely the Catholics of America were identified with the country's growth and prosperity. He referred to the part which Catholics had taken in the nation's early history, and how they had defended their country on every occasion. The lecturer in closing alluded to the unity of feeling existing between Catholics and Protestants regarding the principles of the American constitution.

The county commissioners were in session a short time yesterday and directed McShane, Clough & Moore to repair the road in Ute pass, where it had been washed out by the recent rains. They also allowed the above named firm $300 on account, for doing the work. The resignation of Mr. T. F. Petrie, justice of the peace of Monument precinct, was received and accepted. Mr. W. E. Holbrook was elected to fill the position. Mr. A. J. Hill was elected road overseer of the Colorado City district in place of Mr. James Starr who resigned. After allowing a few bills for road work the board adjourned.

Attention Post.

All comrades of Colorado Springs Post are requested to meet at their hall at 9 15 a. m. sharp Wednesday August 1st for the purpose of attending the funeral of G. N. White deceased.

INDIAN TROUBLES.

Troops Ordered Out to Quell a Disturbance at San Carlos.

An Attack Made by the Indians on Scouts and Herders.

Fears Entertained that they May Leave the Reservation.

Sioux Indians Refuse to Sign or Ratify the Treaty.

Indian Disturbance.

Washington, July 30. The war department has received a telegram from the commanding officer at San Carlos, Arizona, as follows: At the request of the acting Indian agent I yesterday sent Captain Lee, 10th cavalry with his troop and some scouts up to San Carlos to arrest three Indians who were reported intrenched in the rocks and resisting arrest. Lee upon his arrival learned that they had fled and the command followed several trails upon one of which they were found. The scouts exchanged shots with a small party said to belong to Cassadaiz's band. The scouts think that they killed one Indian. About 6 p. m. some of the scouts and Agency [illegible] the agency cattle to the grazing camp were attacked by a party of Indians fifteen miles from here. The scouts and herders fled and what became of the cattle is yet unknown. Captain Lee was at the grazing camp last night. I am expecting to hear from him shortly. I will do all I can to quiet the Indians but there may be serious trouble. The bands are those of Cassadaiz and Chilchanin. Selcer thinks that if the Indians will leave the reservation they will go north and west.

Do Not Like the Treaty.

St. Paul, Minn., July 30.—A special from Standing Rock agency, received at 2 o'clock this morning, says the ultimatum of the Indians was given to the commissioners to-day. The Indians were in council all Thursday night, and after many speeches every Indian gave his assent to the proposition not to sign the treaty. John Gros was chosen to present the ultimatum to the commission, assisted by Gault and other chiefs. Gros referred to broken treaties broken by the whites and spoke about the Black Hills treaty. Chaulung Pratt had said that their lands could not be taken except by consent of three-quarters of the Indians. This was the provision of the other treaty. How then did the whites take the Black Hills, when they only got about three hundred Indians to sign? The Indians [illegible] they always have been in making treaties, and we hope we and our children will talk slow and not be fools hereafter. You move other Indian tribes among us off of land given to the whites. We don't want this, and other tribes will not like it either. The whites owe us much under treaties years ago. The government should give us what it owes before it asks for more. We have our crops to look after and must go back to work. We will not sign. We came here because our agent asked us to, and we did not want to shame him, and you cannot get us to sign." After Gros finished Gault was called, but simply affirmed what had been said. At Chairman Pratt's request the Indians agreed to stay until Monday, but said they would not sign. Agent McLaughlin, who has the complete confidence of the Indians, has done all he could to influence them to sign, but to no avail. Governor Church and Auditor Ward will be down to Monday's conference, but there is little prospect of a change in sentiment.

Wool Market.

Sherman, Hall & Co. of Chicago, in their last wool circular of the 24th inst. state "that the wool market the past week has been fairly active with the same prices of last week. The demand has been good principally from local mills but several large eastern mills have bought to a large extent. The sales are considerable larger than last week amounting to 500,000 lbs of all kinds of wool. Sales of medium Minnesota wools have been reported at 18 to 20 cents. Sales of bright medium wools have been larger this week than last. Fine wools are beginning to sell with more freedom [illegible] ming and Idaho wools are commencing to arrive in large quantities but as yet no sales have been reported. Prices in the country are unchanged but wherever concessions are made buyers appear to be plenty. Manufacturers do not seem to be buying ahead of present wants and are disposed to wait until the tariff bill is settled before stocking up. The stocks of goods in jobbers hands are well cleaned up and they must enter the market for fresh supplies before a great while."

The following quotations on Colorado wools are given:

	Average	Choice
Fine imported	16@16	17@18
Medium do	17@18	18@20

COLORADO CITY ITEMS.

The street sprinkler is a big improvement.

The Cleveland and Thurman club meets to-night.

The G. A. R. post will hold a meeting at Bott & Vanatta's office on August 4th.

No move has yet been made by the postoffice department to establish a money order system in Colorado City, although it has been virtually promised. It is expected however that arrangements will be made before the summer is over.

The business of the Rio Grande railroad at Colorado City for July amounted to over $1200. Sixty-five loaded cars were shipped from the point during the month, including building stone and cement. This is the best showing the road has ever made in the town.

The grand ball under the auspices of the Midland lodge, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, will take place this evening in Templeton hall. It is expected that a large crowd will be in attendance, and it will no doubt be one of the social events of the season.

It is ordained that each county shall be entitled to double the number of delegates to which it is entitled under the above apportionment, if at the last general election for state officers the vote cast for the republican candidate for governor in such county shall have been equal to one-half of the whole vote cast for governor in such county at such election; and that each county shall be entitled to one additional delegate for each fraction of a majority of the whole vote cast for governor in such county at such election.

The reporter of the News sent yesterday in his paper a virulent attack on our city police force and charged that crime was unchecked in this community. We wonder that this man should make this charge since his recent experience with the law authorities of this city. What he said was untrue from beginning to end. If he would draw from his personal experience instead of from his imagination, he would speak of the high respect there is for law in this community.

The Chicago Tribune has a long article on the new edition of Green's "Short History of the English People" which has been revised by Mrs. Green. It begins the criticism as follows:

John R. Green's "Short History" of the English People" is a work of about 900 closely printed pages compiled by him during his later years and by his widow completed for publication. It is a valuable book.

Libraries are sold in Chicago per foot front, and this is the reason that the author of the above has not before met with one of the 300,000 copies of the most notable contribution to history in the past twenty years.

Several names of those who participated in the Harrison and Tyler campaign of 1840 have been handed to Mr. G. H. Stewart. An effort will be made to have this list complete for this county. Some have neglected to give their names and we again draw their attention to the subject. Such a club will do much to revive the glorious memories of the period between the presidential candidacy of the grandfather and the grandson, and impress the young voter that every great reform in this interval has been carried out by the republican party. We do not believe in dead issues. But the deeds of the past are a promise for the future.

The Globe Democrat is the strongest supporter Harrison has in the northwest. It urged on Saturday what we urged on the passage of the Mills bill. It says: "A few timid republican journals are "urging the senate not to present a tariff "bill. They are doing this because they "fear such a measure might conflict with "the party platform in some degree. The "advice is bad and should not be followed. "The republican party of the country "desires its representatives in congress "to prepare a measure such as seems "wisest to them in the present exigency. "No merely obstructive or negative "policy will do now. The party has "always heretofore taken the lead in "remedying evils and bringing "about reforms. It has boldly and successfully grappled with every "problem which has arisen in the past "third of a century. There is no reason "to believe that the party lacks the ability "to devise the proper remedy in the pres"ent emergency. Let it not be said that, "possessing the ability, it lacks the "courage to employ it properly. The bill "might not, and probably would not, pass "the house. The necessity for preparing "one and for vigorously battling for it "to secure its enactment is not the less "urgent, though on that account "for the time." Let the republicans of the senate "do plain and sensible tariff revision bill, and if this should conflict "in any degree with the platform, then so "much the worse for the platform."

The Philadelphia Press has been one of the followers of Kelley and McKinley. But it does not follow them now then. Its position is simple proof that the great mass of the republican party does not believe, in the tariff policy which McKinley says he put into the platform. To bolt the candidates therefore because of the platform is unnecessary. It is bolting only from a small minority. It puts time in active opposition to a party, nine tenths of whose members agree with the bolter. The Press says:

The republican senators have adopted upon the tariff the course dictated by courage and by principle always and everywhere, in the face of great labor, the wise and safe course. The republican majority of the upper chamber accepts its responsibility to the party and the country. To the dodgers and the dastards, the demagogues and the buncombers, the free traders and the free wool of the Millsbill it will oppose a majority to which protection will be the guiding principle and the impartial treatment of all industrial interests the guiding [illegible] disappear but protection will remain, and it does will not be dismissed and destroyed to carry out a theory of practical free trade.

It is gratifying to see that the democratic majority of the house has for three years dodged them.

The republican majority of the senate will place before [illegible] a bill which will show that the revenue can be cut down and the surplus cut off without causing a sudden depression of the values of a single product of the farm. The way is clear and plain. The heavy taxes on food [illegible] on sugar must be removed. The tobacco tax must go. Alcohol used in the arts must be freed from tax, and the profit of whisky industries increased. Lastly, the inequalities of the tariff must be dealt with, not by increasingly multiplying them as the Mills bill does, but by reporting and redressing them. Absolutely and thereby all and in all protection must and shall be maintained.

STATE NEWS.

The Denver authorities are greatly relieved by the scarcity of water for irrigating purposes.

The Grand Junction News has announced the candidacy of State Auditor D. E. Kinney for state treasurer.

The Mesa County fair will be held on September 24, 25 and 26th. The counties ranch and orchard products and fine stock will be large.

At the annual meeting of the directors of Red Mountain railroad Mr. Otto Mears was re-elected president. The road is nearly completed.

The development from Aspen this week amounted to 264 tons of which 150 tons are sent to Leadville, 30 Pueblo, 30 Kansas City and Salt Lake City 30 tons.

ARIZONA ODDITIES.

Rambling Notes on Mountains, Mines and Indians.

(Special Correspondence.)

PHOENIX, A. T., July 20. When Columbus made the egg stand on end, no doubt several of the spectators at once said: "Why, anybody could do that." And now that we are opening rich mines in Arizona and rapidly increasing our output of silver bullion, all the new comers wonder why it was not done before. Wild Indians and want of transportation account for the delay. For it has been known for over a century that the region was rich in minerals. Indeed, any expert in mining can see that this is a mining country; for the exposed rocks show it. In the deep cuts one may see granite, slate and quartzite, and all the schistose and metamorphic rocks which indicate the vicinity, or at least the strong probability, of the precious metals. But there are many very rudden changes in the rock of this territory. Nearly all the high plain in the northern part—5,000 or 7,000 feet above the sea and 250 miles from east to west, is sandstone formation, and so there is nothing better to be hoped for than thin seams of coal and iron.

The big Colorado, however, cuts so deep that you can find all the rocks in its walls; and I have been at one place on that river where the southward wall showed from top to bottom three changes—soft limestone, dark sandstone, red sandstone, gypsum, very hard limestone and then a sort of whity gray rock and under it crystalized rock and granite. You can go up a canyon or along benches and find all these rocks, and the engineers say that the south wall of the big canyon there is over a mile straight up and down. The San Francisco peak is 11,000 feet above the sea, and all the mountains south of that have precious minerals—gold and silver, as well as copper and lead. You come down hill very fast in this direction from Fort Whipple, but Prescott is 4,8 over a mile above the sea, and we come down hill still faster from there to this river—the Gila. South of here the country rises again, and there are the rich mines which have attracted most attention. It is a very hot country in the low plains and not at all cool on the plateaus in the day time; but the nights get very cold. There is the necessity to vary 40 degrees from noon to midnight for many days together in June and July. Hot days and cold nights turn a man brown very fast, and I don't think one of average health would ever get fat in this country. Indeed, I think the climate has a tendency to make a fellow lean and lathy like the wild Indians.

I always had a great curiosity about the Indians, and in 1872 I made a long trip across the Navajo country, and spent many weeks idling among that people and the Zunis and Moquis. But you cannot tell much about Indians from what they say now. So many travelers and missionaries have been among them, and they have heard so much about what white people expect them to say, that they mostly shape it to suit the case. You have to get an old and mighty honest Indian (as Indians go) if you get their real judgment about such things as heaven and hell, a Creator and a hereafter. I have heard and read a great deal about a deep religious instinct among the Indians; but those who found it had better look than I ever did. I have seen all the tribes from Winnipeg to Old Mexico, and I never saw an Indian pray. And as far as people have told me who did see it and hear their prayers, they only prayed when they wanted something very bad—game or fish or vengeance. As near as I can make out, they have an idea that it is very rude and ill mannered to bother their gods unless there is an extreme necessity for it; and I am told by those who understand the language that they generally wind up a prayer with a solemn promise that if their god will help them out this time they will not ask him again for ever so long! My guess would be that the Indians are mostly fatalists.

Potatoes should be kept in a cold, dark, dry place, as also all jellies and jams.

There is good reason to believe that the senate select committee on Pacific railroads will to-day report the Outhwaite bill to the senate favorably and without any amendments.

LORD SALISBURY.

The Prime Minister of England, of Whom Americans Know but Little.

(Special Correspondence.)

LONDON, July 21.—For a prime minister, less is generally known of Lord Salisbury during the full century of the reign [illegible] I am [illegible] with Lord Salisbury, the politician. He must speak for himself to those who are curious in political portraiture. My purpose is to portray Lord Salisbury, the Englishman, typical as he is of [illegible] party politician, as we shall see.

Just a hundred years ago the earls of Salisbury took a lift in the world. They became marquises, for Cecil, unless the [illegible] climb into dukedom, beyond which conspicuous itself could not hitch them higher up the aristocratic tree. It is understood that Lord Salisbury has twice declined the dukedom tendered to him by the queen of late.

Fifty years ago, 1830, was born Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoigne Cecil, the present Marquis of Salisbury. He was younger son, it had no prospect of being a peer, his title as "Lord" Robert Cecil being merely a courtesy one. He graduated in honors at the highest standard of classics in his college and university, a first class all round scholar and a [illegible] man.

[illegible] nation quite naturally and strongly inclined [illegible] won a front place by studious diligence and [illegible] ability. He is by nature a student, and took a good many prizes and honorable distinctions. I can tell of [illegible] boys being kicked by bowling the hoop running along the garden path. Lord Salisbury at once rejected the kicking merit and provided for the hoop's future. If a real Queen Bess were to-day in her room in the field house the days, he would fancy it to be bullied in the glimpses of the moon's coy sheen, unless her prince's namesake gave her sheet on object lesson in the shooting powers of the Edison light.

The profound self-ship of Lord Salisbury, as appears from his more juvenile efforts, is sufficiently attested by the fact that he had been the representative Oxford university since [illegible] is a D. C. L., besides bearing various other substantial degrees. The greatest test of learning in the kingdom does not lightly entrust its highest honors to one under the highest [illegible] accomplishments. The Earl of Salisbury would not have won that signal distinction. The head of that great university must himself be great in intellectual capacity and achievements, and no one however challenged the greatness of Lord Salisbury for this post of honor.

One prime factor in his election has been his high churchmanship. Here we view him in another of his various distinct aspects. Oxford is the nursery of the church, and when it crossed Mr. Gladstone as its representative in the house of commons it was proud of his [illegible] intellectual power, of his fervid high churchmanship, and of his loyalty to the church. When Gladstone placed himself at the head of the Radicals and, tacked on disestablishing the Irish church, Oxford withdrew its confidence, and I can never forget the scene when he offered himself as Radical candidate for Manchester, the first words of his first speech being these [illegible] and, unprecedented, [illegible] frantic cheers of welcome must have lasted ten minutes at least.

And now let us see the premier at home. Said to be gloomy, austere, contemptuous by outsiders and too proud to associate with his fellows, he does [illegible] in private life. Here I can speak what I know. His demeanor is that of a proud man, as that of one who does not feel these so and should have him with driving spell talk.

In appearance he is the ideal aristocrat, tall, strongly made, with a distinguished and thoughtful look that tells of deep study. Though well dressed, you do not see anything but the gentleman to catch your eye. The care worn look and [illegible] his dignity of bearing. [illegible] consciousness of his reputed pride, but it is not hard to discern that it is not of the petty sort, but the pride of conscious distaste for [illegible] and petty things, and I believe, of petty people also. Fond of his own comfy, which [illegible] long been the chief magistrate and [illegible] not head of every social [illegible] [illegible] will take his full rights [illegible] in recognition of a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] company have yet reached the age of fifteen years, and most of them are much younger. Their voices are robust, but expected, are scarcely strong enough to give the best chorus effects, but the setting was well done throughout, and the solos, duets and trios were admirably rendered and never failed to elicit hearty applause. The Mikado is the quaintest and when the most beautiful from a musical standpoint of Sullivan's compositions, and there is always an added interest when it is attempted by children. The performance will be repeated to night. Those who failed to see it last night should avail themselves of the only remaining opportunity. Following is the cast:

The Mikado of Japan ..... Gussie Manning
Nanki-Poo, His son disguised as a wandering minstrel and in love with Yum Yum ..... Mattie Greene
Ko-Ko, Lord High Executioner ..... Laura Bailey
Pooh-Bah, Lord High Everything Else ..... Blanche Thomas
Pish Tush, a Noble Lord ..... Fred Spencer
Yum-Yum, Three sisters, ... Alice Loudon
Pitti-Sing, Wards of Ko-Ko ..... Margie Manning
Peep-Bo, ... Lena Francis
Katisha, an elderly lady in love with Nanki-Poo ..... Helen Gould
Chorus of GENTLEMEN OF JAPAN:
Annie Nichols, Kitty Wells, Elsie Wheeler, Mamie Wheeler, Lizzie Wall, Lizzie Lundeen, Charlie Brown and Harry Thornton.
SCHOOL GIRLS:

Following are yesterday's arrivals at the hotels:

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

It is stated on good authority that tobacco smoking in some of the departments, if not all, in Washington is pursued to such an extent as to render the lady clerks sometimes positively ill, and that they have to discuss. This is a curious commentary on the barbarism of our so-called civilization, and on the chivalry of smoking men. Possibly it may help to explain why women who have passed the civil service examination are so slowly promoted to positions under the government.

Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, superintendent of the department of legislation and petitions for the national W. C. T. U., has prepared and had introduced into the senate a bill to prohibit the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors in the territories, except for medical, scientific and mechanical purposes, and to regulate the manufacture and sale thereof for such excepted purposes. Mrs. Bittenbender has been in Washington since January and will remain until congress adjourns.

Mrs. S. M. Perkins, of Cleveland, O., has just closed her work in the Indian territory where she went under the auspices of the national W. C. T. U. Nine unions have been organized and forty meetings, including the territorial convention, have been held. Mrs. Jane Stapler, of Talequah, was elected president, and a resolution endorsing the action of the national society relative to prohibition and woman's ballot was passed by a vote of nineteen to seven.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

CHAS. B. HALL AND HIS COLLECTION OF WAR TIME PORTRAITS.

He Is the Only Man Who Has Made This a Specialty, and He Has 20,000 Photographs of Men Who Were Engaged in the Civil War.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, July 23. Now and then in the hurly burly of life comes to a man who is pushing along in the achievement of some great purpose so quietly that his fellows fail to know it, and his high aims and pains-taking are not suspected until the results are laid before them. Such a revelation are recognized the services he has rendered mankind.

The foregoing remark is suggested by the story of Mr. Charles B. Hall, a citizen of New York, who is the owner of the largest and most complete collection in the world of portraits and pictures relating to the recent struggle between the north and south.

Seven years ago he was sitting by the bedside of a sick daughter, and in order to keep awake through the watches of the night he began the perusal of a series of books issued by the Scribners, entitled "The Campaigns of the War." He is himself an old soldier, and with a love of art, for by profession he is a steel engraver and at present one of the most celebrated engraving establishment in the country. The thought occurred to him that such a history might be made picturesque, and he at once began to gather specimens to illustrate the text. [illegible] every picture suggestive of illustration, and every place for a map where a map should have been made.

The next day he began the nucleus of his vast undertaking. Second hand bookstores were ransacked, old magazines and pictorial newspapers purchased, long forgotten records sought out, and photographic galleries far and near that existed during the war or immediately after were put under contribution for pictures of the living and dead. A printed form of letter was prepared, and Mr. Hall opened an immense correspondence with those who had participated in the great drama, in which he solicited contributions for his work. And they began to come,

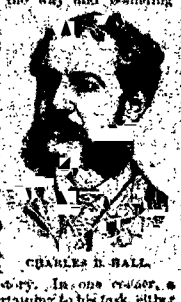
Not as spies, but in battalions, until that which was at first but a handful may now be multiplied by thousands. In the matter of postage stamps alone Mr. Hall has [illegible] dollars, while in the purchase of magazines, late prints, proof copies, costly sets of books for which he had no use save possibly a few pictures, the outlay has run into figures that he is very careful never to mention to his wife. He has told me privately, however, that he could build another handsome house with the sum.

By invitation of a friend I recently spent a day at the residence of Mr. Hall in the suburbs of the city. It was just what one might expect to find—the home of a genuine artist; every room filled with bric-a-brac, etchings and paintings upon the walls, and articles of virtu in every nook and corner where could be located a line of beauty or a bit of color. The host was just that character of man I expected to meet, gentle, refined, thoroughly informed and an enthusiast. He talked lovingly and well of his work, complained of no toil and looked forward to no time when it should be ended.

"But come into my 'den,'" he facetiously remarked, leading the way and bounding like a school boy up two steps at a time to a room on the second story, "and see for yourself how much has been accomplished and how much more remains to be done." My friend very properly suggested that it should be called an Eden. It was a place not to be [illegible]. There was not a patch of wall that did not hold a picture. In one corner, a library of books pertaining to his task, either works of reference or those awaiting the deft hand of the master to give them new value; shelves piled high up with magazines dating from 1861 to the present time; pigeon holes filled with unmounted photographs; portfolios with drawers of different sizes stored with completed pictures; here a chiffonier devoted to the navy, there another rich in etchings of battle scenes, and a third bulky with a priceless hoard of engravings and other prints of Rebellion days told the story of the Confederates from the signatures on the first ordinance of secession to the last scrip in the parlor of the Appomattox farmhouse. Almost incongruously mixing with this goodly company was a fishing basket, rod and reel, a pair of long legged rubber boots, and a wicker covered, mysterious looking concern strangely like a creel. Mr. Hall was going a-fishing the next day, and those were his traps. I have since learned that there is not a trout stream or a black bass hole within a circuit of a hundred miles in which he has not dropped a very wormy and successful line. The fact is only incidentally mentioned to show that even an enthusiast in art may still be of the earth, earthy.



CHARLES B. HALL.

In the course of the conversation that followed, the writer expressed a wish to hear a bit of Mr. Hall's personal history. He answered modestly, "You may think it strange that all this labor of illustrating American history has been done by an Englishman, yet it is even so. My father, Henry S. Hall, came to America with his family in 1830, and quickly took his proper place among the first engravers of the country. I was then but a lad, and subsequently having obtained a fair school education went to work in his establishment. When the war broke out, no American was more patriotic than he, and a week after the sounding of the guns on Fort Sumter found his four sons enlisted as privates and en route to Virginia. I joined the Seventy-first of New York, and well remember what a time we had marching down Broadway on the 20th of April, twenty-seven years ago. After our rough and terrible experience at Bull Run, we returned home, and I then assisted in organizing Company C of the Ninety-fifth New York regiment, in which I went back to the field and served for nearly two years, doing nominal duty as first sergeant, but really acting as captain.

"After the war, I resumed my occupation as an engraver, and about the first plate I worked upon was a picture representing the death of Gen. Lyon. In a casual way I had accumulated a number of sketches possessing more or less value, but it was not until the sickness of my daughter that I began the work of making a collection in a systematic manner.

"The task has grown to an unexpected magnitude. For the purpose of illustrating the work on the American war by the Count de Paris, I have thus far obtained about 1,800 portraits and more than 500 general pictures and 150 maps. When the work is completed I shall have about twelve volumes. Many of the pictures I am compelled to make myself, others are copied and inlaid, the size of the sheets being nine and one-half by twelve inches. So far I have made for this work 107 original etchings on steel or copper and ninety-seven artotypes, working them up in India ink.

"My next undertaking was Swinton's 'Campaigns of the Army of the Potomac,' and for this book I have accumulated about 600 portraits of eminent persons, besides numerous maps and sketches. Each of the Scribner series I have made into two volumes. After these I began upon the life of Abraham Lincoln. The peculiarity of this collection is that the same picture is not used twice to illustrate the same subject, yet it contains about 2,000 portraits and 600 views and maps. There are 57 different portraits of Lincoln alone, ranging from the youngest extant to those taken after death.

"The illustrations for Grant's memoirs so far obtained—77—[illegible] portraits of the general, and I have 1,200 other distinguished men and some five or six hundred views and maps. Of course I am still engaged in the work of completing all of these books. Kindred works are Lee's memoirs and the memoirs of McClellan. I have also a vast number of subjects illustrating the three volumes of Boynton's history of the United States navy, and am only awaiting the appearance of a good work on the Confederate navy to do the same by that."

"And how many pictures, all told, do you think your collection embraces?"

"A dozen or so I can calculate, about 21,000," was the reply.

In the course of further conversation, I learned that all of the [illegible] material was systematically arranged and catalogued that [illegible] Mr. Hall could lay his hand on any picture in the collection. As an experiment, I asked to see the Dutch bloodhound of Maj. Warner, the officer in charge of Libby prison. He produced it immediately. Next, I called for Mrs. Surratt. Even of her I received by one portgait. Later I wanted to see a number of Confederate and Federal officers identified with certain events, but no one was missing. Of this class of portraits he has many thousands, some of the subjects being represented at various stages of life, thus affording an interesting physiognomical study.

One would suppose that such an enormous task interferes with his daily pursuits, but such is not the case. The work is done chiefly at night, but never at [illegible] o'clock. It is then that rare [illegible] are [illegible] upon [illegible] of copper or steel and made ready for the printer's presses, by the way, that requires three or four days. Occasionally [illegible] magazines and illustrated newspapers, and it goes without saying that Mr. Hall is a welcome visitor to the [illegible] and literary world. Such is [illegible] pursuit, through his pains-taking that the public are enabled to look upon men and scenes that are illustrious in the nation's history and which no one but Mr. Hall can furnish.

F. G. DE FONTAINE.

The temperance cause in England, especially in Liverpool, has met with a severe loss in the death of Dr. J. Muir Howie, which occurred on the 5th of June. He was a vice president of the United Kingdom Alliance, and a warm supporter of total abstinence and popular prohibition movements of that country; while his eminent medical ability, great official integrity and self denying personal efforts gave him wide influence in social life and all reformatory work.

At the weekly meeting of the Hebrew society yesterday afternoon the treasurer reported total subscriptions to date amounting to $1,250. Several additional subscriptions knowing to have been made were not reported, and hence are not included in the above amount. It has been suggested that a most fitting and appropriate thank offering from those residents of our city who have regained health here would be a subscription to the sanitarium fund.

The ball game to-day between the Colorado Springs, Grays and El Paso should be and undoubtedly will be well attended. The El Paso with Bates and Everett for their battery will be as good as the best teams that have played here and will give the regular home team some good, lively rustling. The teams will play as follows:

Colorado Springs.		El Paso.
McMahon, W.	catcher	Everett
Ferguson	pitcher	Bates

BEST LINE EAST.

The Union Pacific Ry is by all odds the "Best Line East," on account of the fast time that is made and the reasonable hours for leaving Denver. Also the close connection that is made in Union depots with the trunk lines from Kansas City, Council Bluffs, St. Louis, and Chicago, reaching all the principal cities in the east. The C. P. Ry. is also the short line to the Pacific Coast, running two trains daily west and four trains to the east daily. The evening trains from Colorado Springs make close connections in Denver with the Union Pacific Ry. c-23-tf
